Synopsis

The central characters of 1956, Central Travancore are two siblings, Onan and Kora. Kora runs away from the family home immediately after his first child is born. In search of his brother, Onan reaches the high ranges of Central Travancore, where a vast majority of the land is still unoccupied by humans. He finds his brother after a year of search, doing random work to survive during the course of that year. The contrast between the natures of these two brothers is also the contrast in struggle between freedom and duty. This can be observed in both of them. Onan recollects an early conversation with a bunch of friends and inspires Kora to gather a few men to go for hunting. When the real and imagined nature turn out to be larger than their will and strength can handle, they learn the harsh realities of the endeavor they have taken up.

Director's Biography

Born and brought up in the high ranges of Kerala, Don Palathara did the latter part of his formal education in Australia. After studying at International Film School Sydney, he returned home to write and direct independent features with minimal budget and resources. In all his films, his own birthplace and house appear many a times. Another trait of his films is the use of nonprofessional actors and minimal crew.

Synopsis

Abharkha literally translates to desire – a strong feeling of wanting something. The story travels through the journey of two characters, Milan and Mira, where we find childish affection, the needs of a capitalistic village and a women’s will to hide and fight. Milan is a quiet and an aloof kid. He shares a very unique bond with his mother and a blind teacher at his school whom he calls Girish sir. They guide him through life in their own simple ways.

Mira is a woman who is battling her personal and professional life all by herself. We understand her resilience to hold on patiently as she is isolated in her journey of marriage. The story is in small moments of cries, whispers and smiles through Milan’s constant struggle and Mira’s hope. Their struggles might be a success or a failure, but eventually the story lies in the moments in between.

Director’s Biography

Synopsis

Chanbi and Upasna want to prepare a special North Eastern Dish, Axone Pork, for their best friend Minam's wedding. The ingredients are bought, the stove is alight, the gang has gathered; there is just one glitch! They all live in New Delhi now and not Northeast India. And for people here, the dish emits a strong aroma, which seems to eliminate not from a culinary kitchen but more like from a...lavatory! The gang fears the pungent odour of the dish will invite their neighbours' and landlord's wrath! Comedic chaos ensues and unexpected obstacles arise as they struggle to find a safe place where they can prepare the dish in peace. The film explores the travails of this young group of buddies, as they grapple with outright racism and the upheavals of their interpersonal relationships, throughout the course of an eventful day!

Director's Biography

Nicholas Kharkongor has worked extensively in theatre and film for 20 years. His plays have been performed in India and abroad, including in London and New York. In film, he assisted one of India's foremost indie filmmakers, Rajat Kapoor. His debut feature, Mantra, starring Kalki Koechlin, Rajat Kapoor and Adil Hussain, won Best Film at the 2016 South Asian International Film Festival, presented by HBO, in New York.

Synopsis

Is religion greater than life or is life is greater than religion? This is the story of a Muslim family. Their nine month old child is suffering from Hypoxic Ischemic Enteropathy. Due to family problems, the father shifts his family to another house which is located in front of a mosque. At the daily announcement of azaan, the child cries every time and is unable to sleep well. After trying to understand the child's constant crying, they come to know that he is suffering because of the noise of the loudspeaker. So the child's father, his brother and the respected villagers request mosque's muezzin to stop. But the muezzin refuses to meddle with the religious rules. And then one day the child dies. Every person from the village is shocked. While burying the child in the graveyard, the father blames the muezzin and tells him to stay away. The muezzin goes to the mosque, and then calls the Azaan without the loudspeaker.

Synopsis

Ramji, a humble iron-smith from a small village, is a devotee of Lord Vitthal. For years he has followed the Waarkari (a devotional sect) tradition of going on a pilgrimage with thousands of other devotees. His world comes crashing down after his only son drowns in a flooding river. Ramji is not only sad but also angry at God. He and his friends are trying to make sense of the tragedy. One rainy night, unfolds a tale of grief and ecstasy where the seeming opposites just collapse and dissolve into the oneness of being. Life offers Ramji a chance to 'see' the non-duality of birth and death, and make peace with his grief.

Director's Biography

Sumitra Bhav, a social worker, teacher and a social scientist-researcher turned to filmmaking in 1985 to communicate her research findings with the illiterate women in India. Throughout her journey the effort has been to combine filmmaking as an effective tool for education, and as an art form. She has directed 19 feature films, more than 70 short films, 3 TV serials and 5 telefilms. Her films have received six international awards, 11 national awards and more than 45 state awards.

Synopsis

The story of the chief Rabbi of Copenhagen's Jewish community, who would come to be known as Rabbi Doolittle. Arriving in Tel Aviv in 1935, Max Shorenstein left his honorable position, in order to fulfill a longtime dream: to build a zoo and teach the children of Palestine-Eretz Israel about the love of animals. His dream had come true and against all odds, the Tel Aviv Zoo became the city's greatest attraction. Yet the envy, greed and corruption by city officials had him banished from the very paradise he himself built. It is a tale of a city raised from sand, only to become an international cultural and financial hub a century later, and the price that was paid for this exponential growth.

Synopsis

Naren Upadhyay wakes up inside a wall, behind the concrete. With terror, he realizes he has been plastered within these walls. There is a digital clock counting down from ninety minutes and his mobile phone has no network. There's not enough air for him to live long, and every fifteen minutes the walls come a little closer than before. The lady abductor starts speaking to him within the walls. Naren realizes the timer to be a communication device which allows a limited number of calls. Trilok, the crime branch officer suspects the timer to be a bomb - which may go off when it runs out. The abductor is not interested in his money as the transfer has gone to charity. The lady in the speaker slowly breaks down this big bad wolf of politics, starting with, "Why do you think you are here Naren?"

Synopsis

Josef - Born in Grace is an adaptation of a short story Joseph written by Umakanta Mahapatra and is set in the foothills of Himalayas in India. Father O'Hara (Victor Banerjee), a missionary doctor with the help of his caretaker Maularam (Sudarshan Juyal), raises an orphan baby Joseph (Hitesh Bisht). While still a young boy, Joseph is sent to Dehradun for his studies and vocational training. Joseph (Subrat Dutta) returns with a reputation as a great cook as well as his love for alcohol. The film explores in its unfolding of time, the different paths that Father O'Hara, Joseph, and Maularam take in their respective journeys for spiritual fulfillment through memories, duty, and search as well as their interaction with friends and acquaintances. Through static mise en scene, the narrative of the film reflects the all-encompassing nature of time, pre-empting and repeating itself in allegorical hues.

Synopsis

Bank-teller Freud (38) wakes up one day with a horse's tail. Convinced that it is connected to his dreams, he meets an elderly oracle who prophesies that he is slowly becoming a horse. When he tells his mathematics professor of how he dreamt of a horse with no tail, he is told it represents a forgotten woman from his past. An astrologer interprets his dream as impotence. Is he becoming a eunuch? Piecing together the puzzle, Freud is visited by the woman from his dream. She is the spirit of the rainbow, Van Ga, who helps him reach the parallel world of his childhood through a well. He is transported to the forgotten world of a little girl (Neeli) with whom he'd promised to jump into the well, grow wings and fly away, like Neeli, their Goddess. To this day, Neeli waits in the well. But Freud is now a 38-year-old man with a horse's tail.

Synopsis

In a small beach town in Bangladesh, Ayesha and Sohel break out of social prohibitions and violent oppositions from their poverty-ridden families to become successful surfers. Unlike other boys and girls, they are trained by the first self-made Bangladeshi surfer, Amir. This unusual phenomenon in the surfing world gets international attention from the surfing community and documentary filmmakers. They start getting money for surfing. This generates jealousy, squabbles and power tussles in the small town. Surfing brings new-found fame and glory to Sohel, which leads him to get derailed and seek an extravagant, reckless lifestyle in the capital city. He goes through a failed relationship with an Australian filmmaker Esther. On the other hand, Ayesha, ironically, has to suffer through a forced marriage and a life of misery because of her 'prohibited' love for surfing. Their passion for surfing later reunites them. They come together again, and this leads to a resurgence of enthusiasm for surfing in their small beach town.

Synopsis

OTHTHA SERUPPU size 7 is set in current day Chennai, in a world where the divide between rich and poor is vast, greed, betrayal and crime roam free, and every individual carries with him/her, the psychological stress of the lives they've lived so far. A middle aged man Masilamani, a security guard at a popular sports and recreation club, is being questioned as a murder suspect while his terminally ill young son waits outside the investigation room. Throughout the film, he is the only actor seen on screen, while other characters are only voices that interact with him. His strange tale with moments of unexpected comedy and sudden displays of wit leaves us questioning who is really he, what he's done and if he deserves the punishment that is staring him in the face.

Synopsis

It is an adaptation of Franz Kafka's short story entitled A Hunger Artist. The story deals with a young man in his late twenties, Bhuto, belonging to the lower middle class income group. He regularly sits on 'bhuk hartal' (hunger strikes) protesting against the international incidents of violence happening all over the world. He gets used to tolerating hunger for days as the occurrences of violence are so very frequent across the globe in our times. A street-smart business-minded friend, called Ghona, picks him up as a prized pawn, who he can take advantage of Ghona can see 'a hunger artist' in him and asks him to sell his 'art of hunger' as a 'reality show' artist which will earn them money. What becomes of Bhuto...is he able to hold on to his righteousness or does he get swayed by the fame and fortune.

Synopsis

There are many strange but true stories about mysticism linked to the sacred river Ganga. A violent attack leaves a man to die. His lifeless body floats downstream. He is rescued and nursed to consciousness, but has lost his memory. Near the mountains, a veiled woman reaches the gates of a monastery and pleads them to adopt her traumatized child. She swears never to return. Later, the amnesiac man gets an adopted name - Raahi and moves around rudderless, looking for purpose. Serendipity comes calling when he bumps into Swara (one who sings mellifluously), the same traumatized girl, now a beautiful Sufi woman. Raahi accompanies Swara on her spiritual journey downstream. Little do they know that their destinies are intertwined and the journey transforms their lives. While Raahi tries to piece together his jigsaw puzzle in a bid to recollect, Swara is tormented by the unravelling of her tragic past.

Synopsis

This movie is a story of every child and how childhood experiences help them to live their adult life with courage, dignity and love. Facing many such odd situations, the protagonist in the story, Tanmay, with the help of these very words, Ussey Kya Ho Jayega provides a different outlook to others as well as himself, to overcome hurdles in personal and professional life. This has been described very captivatingly in the movie. The film has a basis in real-life events with many IAS officers eventually joining politics to get over the issue of troublesome systematic failures. During our lifetime, we encounter such a situation, where we have the feeling of being defeated by the bureaucratic mindset of seniors and norms of orthodox society. Tanmay as an upright IAS officer- Rural Development, had to deal with similar issues yet ends up earning love and respect of the villagers.

Synopsis

Wonderland is a hard-hitting contemporary dance musical, a thought provoking psychological drama exploring the changing dynamics of relationships in modern India. The film explores the internal turmoil of its central characters who appear normal at the surface but are fractured by their unresolved childhood memories that go on to dictate the choices of their complicated relationships and the archetypal patterns that they are bound to. Since the central character is a choreographer, key moments of the protagonist's life appear as dark, intimate dance compositions. The struggle of a man's moral integrity versus his biological inevitability and how he finds closure to breaking his patterns are powerfully conveyed through the medium of contemporary dance. This 22 minute short is intended as a pilot: a pitch for a full-length feature film
